The National Weather Service issued a winter weather advisory between 7 a.m. and 1 p.m. today due to snow and wind gusts as high as 41 miles per hour. However, little or no snow accumulation is expected in the Boston area today. Tonight, the Hub can expect less than half an inch of accumulation, according to the NWS, and more snow and rain on Friday. METRO

After surviving two days lost on mountain, teen returns home

Nicholas Joy, 17, 'tired and overwhelmed' following harrowing experience Built snow cave to stay alive

The Medford teenager who survived two bitterly cold nights on a Maine mountain by building a snow cave returned home Wednesday afternoon and is feeling "tired and overwhelmed," his family said.

Nicholas Joy was welcomed home by family and well-wishers who cheered when he entered his mother's house just before 2 p.m. He was released from a Maine hospital Tuesday morning.

The 17-year-old was carrying a plastic bag containing Styrofoam take-out food containers. A neighbor also brought by some food.

"Nick is just tired and overwhelmed ... but he's perfectly fine," said his sister, Alysson Atherton.

Joy wasn't ready to talk about the two nights he spent lost on Sugarloaf Mountain, his family said, and he was rushed inside the house by his mother as about a dozen members of the media shouted questions.

The house had been decorated with signs and balloons that read "Welcome home."

Speaking to reporters, his mother Donna said that she didn't want to talk about the steps he took on the mountain to survive other than to say that "he just did what he had to do."

"It's truly amazing that he did what he did to stay alive and to try to find a way to be found, and he was found," she said.

Maine Warden Service authorities said Joy built a snow cave to shield himself from the elements of the mountain after he apparently became lost while skiing with his family last weekend. He was last seen by his father Sunday afternoon and was picked up by a snowmobile rider Tuesday morning.

His mother praised Joseph Paul, the Massachusetts snowmobile rider who came upon her son and drove him to emergency personnel.

"He got picked up by an angel," she said.

Snowy survival

Nicholas Joy knew how to survive on a cold, snowy mountain for two days with basically nothing. Could you? Here are some winter survival tips from WonderHowTo.com.

- Find a shelter. If you can't find one, make one. A snow cave or improvised lean-to can provide good protection from the elements.
- Cover any exposed part of your body. Keep your head covered to prevent loss of body heat.
- Take shallow breaths. Cover your mouth with a scarf so you don't breathe in cold air.
- Avoid heavy exertion that makes you sweat.
- Build a fire and keep it burning. Use it to melt snow for water to stay hydrated.

Transit supporters on late-night, weekend T service cuts: Bad idea

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ These fare gates could be closing for good on weeknights and weekends.

Just as talks about keeping the T open later were heating up, the MBTA has proposed closing earlier on weekdays, and altogether on weekends, to help close a $120 million budget gap.

It comes as no surprise that the idea doesn't sit well with local groups who want more access to public transit.

"Boston is a great place to live and move to, and that's partly because of the T," said Kristina Egan of Transportation for Massachusetts, a group that wants safe, convenient and affordable transportation. "If we are shrinking hours ... it's going to be harder to keep the students here after graduation. It's not a good idea. We need more transit service, not less."

Transportation officials this week discussed the possibility of eliminating bus routes, canceling weekend T service or weekday service after 11 p.m., and doing away with weekend commuter rail service.

The proposals came just weeks after two Suffolk University students launched Boston Stay Up, a grassroots social media push for later T service, seven days a week.

Morgan Rousseau
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

Why it's a bad idea

"Cutting weekend service would immensely harm the city's hospitality and tourist industry. They can't get to Boston's restaurants or museums. That would be such a turn-off for so many people. I don't think it's a good idea," said 20-year-old Funsho Owojori, co-founder of Boston Stay Up.

Her counterpart Joel Edwards pointed to the potential loss of revenue in shutting down weekend service, particularly on the commuter rail.

"So much of the city's tourists come from around the state on day trips. We'd lose tourist dollars," he said.

While no weekend service would be a nearly impossible pill to swallow, Egan said closing down service earlier on business days would also have a massive effect on the city's workers.

"That means people can't get to their second shifts or overnight shifts. People need the T all times of day."

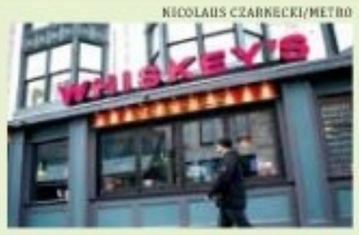
Cops: Boylston St. fight preceded man getting hit by car

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO



A fight outside a popular Boylston Street bar early Wednesday is what led to a man being run over and dragged down the roadway by a taxi cab.

Officers were called to a car accident outside Whiskey's bar just after 2 a.m. There they found a man who had been seriously injured after being dragged down the street by a taxi. Witnesses told police that before the crash a man was yelling in the street and assaulted the man hit by the cab. "Witnesses stated the suspect was in the middle of Boylston Street and yelled, 'f— Boston, and f— your businesses," turned around and punched the victim, who fell in the street," police said in a statement.

Just after that, a cab traveling down the road ran over the victim and dragged him until passersby motioned for the driver to stop, police said.

Police said the victim suffered lower-body and facial injuries but was expected to survive. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

▶ Snow in the D.C. area

Washington shuts down ahead of fierce snowstorm

WASHINGTON. The U.S. government shut down yesterday ahead of a fierce snowstorm packing heavy, wet snow that had blanketed the Midwest, leaving thousands without power and forcing hundreds of flights to be canceled.

Washington could get slammed by its biggest snowfall in as much as two years, with 6 inches to 12 inches expected after the storm moved eastward into the mid-Atlanticstates, the National Weather Service said. REUTERS

Election bump over, Obama approval drops to 43 percent

WASHINGTON. Less than two months into his second term, President Barack Obama's approval rating has dropped and Americans blame him and his fellow Democrats almost as much as his Republican opponents for a fiscal mess.

A Reuters/Ipsos online poll released yesterday showed 43 percent of people approve of Obama's handling of his job, down 7 percentage points from Feb. 19.

Most of that steep drop came in the week of Feb. 26 when it was becoming clear that Washington was going to be unable to put aside partisan differences and agree to halt automatic budget cuts which started last Friday.

Confounding the White House's efforts to blame Republicans for the cuts, most respondents in the online survey hold both Democrats and Republicans responsible. REUTERS

US House approves bill to fund government through September

The House of Representatives yesterday passed legislation to keep federal funds flowing to government agencies through Sept. 30, seeking to avert shutdowns that otherwise would begin on March 27 when current funding expires.

The House bill was passed by 267 votes to 151. It gives President Barack Obama's administration flexibility in how it will achieve savings in defense and veterans' programs that are required as part of the $85 billion in automatic spending cuts that began on Friday.

The vote came as President Barack Obama prepared to meet with several Republican senators for dinner yesterday as part of his effort to revive talks to tackle the nation's long-term deficit, the White House said.

The Democratic president is trying to cobble together what he calls a "common sense caucus" among lawmakers to help resolve U.S. budget woes and push his legislative agenda.

A source, who asked not to be identified, said Obama also plans to meet with House of Representatives Democrats next week, although the date has not yet been set.

In recent days, Obama has searched for common ground with senators who in the past have indicated a willingness to compromise on budget issues. The White House has suggested talks could center around a deal that includes new tax revenues. REUTERS

▶ Obama is scheduled to travel to Capitol Hill next week, when he will address Senate Republicans at a lunch on March 14.

At the heart of the fiscal crisis is disagreement over how to rein in the $16.7 trillion debt.

'Continuing resolution' heads to Senate

Last Friday marked the start of $85 billion in across-the-board budget cuts that are to be carried out by Sept. 30. It was not clear whether Obama, in his new contacts with Republican senators, was still trying to negotiate a substitute for those cuts.

Next week, the Senate is expected to take up the "continuing resolution" to keep the government operating through the remainder of this fiscal year, which ends on Sept. 30.

That measure is expected to give broader flexibility on achieving the automatic spending cuts than yesterday's House-passed bill. REUTERS

How do you feel after the death of Chavez

Karla Mesas, 27, graphic designer, Caracas

"I didn't support him or his ideology, but like with any human being that dies the news is shocking. Like with any person there's a time for mourning, but people don't cry for anyone. I won't cry for him even though I understand the suffering. He did a lot of harm too, and he had to pay for it, which he did with his illness."

Miguel Matos, 43, constructor, Caracas

"I'm very sad and hurt because we've lost a ray of hope in Latin America and the world. We already miss him. I can't tell you anymore because I can't think, I'm too sad." METRO WORLD NEWS

Mourners parade Chavez's coffin

Weeping and shouting, a sea of Hugo Chavez's supporters paraded his coffin through the streets of Caracas yesterday in an emotional outpouring that could help his deputy win an election and keep his self-styled socialist revolution alive.

Hundreds of thousands of "Chavistas" marched behind a hearse carrying the remains of the flamboyant and outspoken president, draped in Venezuela's blue, red and yellow national flag.

Avenues resounded with chants of "Chavez lives! The fight goes on!" as supporters showered flowers onto the coffin and jostled to touch it. Loudspeakers played recordings of the charismatic socialist giving speeches and singing.

Some supporters held heart-shaped placards that read: "I love Chavez!" Others cheered from rooftops, waving T-shirts.

Ending one of Latin America's most remarkable populist rules, Chavez died on Tuesday at age 58 after a two-year battle with cancer that was first detected in his pelvis.

His body was to be taken to a military academy later on Wednesday to lie in state until his state funeral on Friday.

The future of Chavez's socialist policies, which won him the adoration of poor Venezuelans but infuriated opponents who denounced him as a dictator, now rests on the shoulders of Vice President Nicolas Maduro, the man he tapped to succeed him.

"We ask our people to channel this pain into peace," Maduro said.

Maduro, a 50-year-old former bus driver and union leader, will probably face Henrique Capriles, the centrist opposition governor of Miranda state, in an election now due within weeks in the OPEC nation with the world's largest oil reserves.

One recent opinion poll gave Maduro a strong lead over Capriles, in part because he has received Chavez's blessing as his heir apparent, and he is likely to benefit from the surge of emotion following the president's death.

Authorities said the vote would be called within 30 days, as stipulated by the constitution, but did not specify the date.

The tall, mustachioed Maduro has long been a close ally of Chavez. He pledges to continue his legacy and is unlikely to make major policy changes soon.

He will now focus on marshalling support from Chavez's diverse coalition, which includes leftist ideologues, business leaders and radical armed groups called "colectivos."

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

More details on January Jones and Liam Hemsworth

Rumors have been swirling around Liam Hemsworth (who is currently engaged to Miley Cyrus) and January Jones getting "hot and heavy" at a pre-Oscar party at the Chateau Marmont and now Life & Style has more dirt on the hookup.

"They went to a private house party, and right in the middle of the party, January was clinging to Liam, saying, 'You're so handsome,'" a guest reveals in the new issue of Life & Style. "He kept saying, 'We can't do this here.' Then they left holding hands and went out in the hallway and were making out. She was wasted. It wasn't good."

For their part, the magazine has pictures of the two stars riding in a car together on the night in question. "When it comes to men, January just goes for it," another source tells the magazine. "She doesn't seem to care if they're with someone or not. It's like a challenge for her, a game."

As challenges go, making out with Liam Hemsworth seems like an easy one. What about climbing Mount Kilimanjaro? Or staying off of Facebook for an entire week? Think big, January!

Meet 'Givenchy Kanye'

MTV has released its extensive "Hottest MCs" list, and Kanye West is not pleased to find himself sitting at the No. 7 spot. "I feel like for them to put me at No. 7, they had to bring up things they didn't like," he says during a call into New York's Hot 97 radio station. "What happens with these type of things and the people that review it, when I come in and I have the pink polo and the backpack, I'm checking all the boxes of that a Tribe Called Quest era and all that, so they want to champion it. They don't like Givenchy Kanye. They don't like Kanye in a kilt, they don't like Kanye in a relationship." Givenchy Kanye! Kilt Kanye! Boyfriend Kanye! I want all of these action figures, please.

Talking points

Poehler responds to Swift

Taylor Swift is making some powerful enemies. In response to Amy Poehler and Tina Fey's joke at Swift's expense at January's Golden Globes ceremony. "You know, Katie Couric is one of my favorite people," Swift tells Vanity Fair. "She said to me she had heard a quote that she loved that said, 'There's a special place in hell for women who don't help other women.'" Poehler has a response of her own: "Aw, I feel bad if she was upset," Poehler tells the Hollywood Reporter. "I am a feminist, and she is a young and talented girl. That being said, I do agree I am going to hell. But for other reasons. Mostly tax stuff."

Is Kate Middleton having a princess?

Did Kate Middleton accidentally let the cat out of the bag when it comes to whether she and Prince William are having a boy or a girl? During a public appearance this week, Middleton was given a teddy bear as a gift and said, "Thank you, I'll take that for my d..." before cutting herself off, according to the Telegraph. Attendee Sandra Cook, who was standing beside Middleton, asked her, "You were going to say daughter, weren't you?" to which Middleton reportedly replied, "No, I don't know."

Franco keeps his sexuality in question

James Franco is willing to admit he's at least partially responsible for any speculation about whether he's gay or straight. "One of the things that's very much part of my public image is the question of my sexuality," he tells Attitude magazine. "I get asked about it from all sides. It's partly my doing and partly not my doing." From the roles he chooses to his directing efforts, homosexuality has been a popular topic for Franco. But what he's really interested in is a high-profile actor coming out of the closet. "I think that the people I have known who are performers who haven't publicly come out didn't because they're afraid it'll hurt their careers," he says. "If there's somebody that was well-respected and very secure with their career, I could see it happening in a positive way."

Must-see

MERIE WEISMILLER WALLACE, SMPSP

▶ James Franco and Mila Kunis dash through a trippy alternate dimension in "Oz the Great and Powerful."

1 'Oz the Great and Powerful' In order to avoid a repeat of 1985's "Return to Oz," which terrified kids (or at least parents) into dismal returns, Disney has hired the guy who made three "Evil Dead" movies. Sam Raimi directs this well-behaving prequel starring everyone's idea of an old-timey actor: mumbling stoner James Franco.

5 more ...

Reasons to hit theaters this weekend

2 'Dead Man Down' Noomi Rapace and her "Girl With the Dragon Tattoo" director, Niels Arden Oplev, reunite in America for this revenge saga with Colin Farrell and (why not?) Isabelle Huppert.

3 'The ABCs of Death' Horror anthologies are hot again, and this shorts package boasts 26 of them, from directors all over the world (including "House of the Devil"'s Ti West). For the record, that's not a record: "Lumiere and Company" boasts 41 shorts.

4 'No' In this rollicking Chilean docu-dramedy, Gael Garcia Bernal plays an ad whiz hired to head the campaign to oust monstrous dictator Augusto Pinochet from power. Spoiler: It worked!

5 'Yossi' Israeli filmmaker Eytan Fox makes a sequel to his 2002 breakthrough, "Yossi & Jagger," following the former (Ohad Knoller), still reeling from the latter's death, as he finds new love with a soldier.

6 'Emperor' Hot off the Oscar he almost won, Tommy Lee Jones plays General MacArthur in this docudrama about the decision over whether to try Emperor Hirohito for war crimes at the end of WWII. ● MATT PRIGGE

PHOTODISC

Will an e-dating consultant help you find love?

Online dating is a reality of the love game, whether you're just looking around or on a serious quest for a lifelong partner. Sites like OkCupid, Match.com and eHarmony try to make finding someone simple, but they can be disappointing and frustrating. Now, one solution to the e-dating conundrum is gaining traction: consultants. These pros help clients strategize and punch up their profiles to stand out in the competitive world of digitalized courtship.

"Most people are not very good at online dating," says Evan Marc Katz, dating coach and founder of the e-dating consulting service eCyrano.

Quoted

"It's like the gym. You don't lose weight by signing up for the gym. That's why people hire personal trainers — to show them how to use the equipment." KATZ

eCyrano rewrites clients' profiles based on a lengthy questionnaire and detailed phone call. Katz, who dated online for 10 years before meeting his wife offline at a party, says his team of freelance writers promise profiles that are more authentic than what most users write for themselves. He contends that the majority of online-dating fumbles involve unrealistic expectations: "Online dating gives people the illusion of choice, not actual choice."

Then, of course, there are the photos. Companies like New York Image Consultant offer services like a Re-Imaging package, which includes hair-styling and makeup, photos in a range of outfits and poses, plus Photoshopping, for $1,500. Consultant Amanda Sanders puts it bluntly: "The reality is, they choose your picture over someone else's because it captures their eye. The text isn't as important as the visual aspect." Sanders works with clients who travel to New York for her firm's services. Like Katz, Sanders asserts that her business vastly improves a client's chances. As always, though, the face-to-face date is up to you.

Not a sure thing

Dan Slater, author of "Love in the Time of Algorithms: What Technology Does to Meeting and Mating" is skeptical about some consultants' claims.

Though he lauds dating sites for helping people find happiness, Slater believes the business of online dating can be predatory: "The difference between happiness and unhappiness is rarely a consultant."

Common sense should win this argument

RE: "PRIDE AND PREJUDICE IN COMPARING ANIMALS VS. HUMANS" (METRO, MARCH 5) I hate to tell you this, letter writer Feng Xia, but bringing up Nazis doesn't automatically win you an argument. A cat is not a "race." It is a species. Do animals deserve safety and respect? Yes. In individual scenarios or in family units, are we to put pets before people? That's insane. Any reasonable human being would say that given the option to save a pet from a house fire or a person, one would save the person. Similarly, I think most reasonable human beings can agree that shooting a dog is cruel and unnecessary. (It should be noted that Mindy McCready, having subsequently committed suicide, was likely not in a reasonable state of mind.) So what exactly are people arguing for or against? It's just gotten silly and out of proportion.
ROXANNE MICHAUD, VIA E-MAIL

RE: "IT'S A FOOD CHAIN, NOT A FOOD CO-OP" (METRO, MARCH 6) I would love to hear how King concludes we are the "most evolved" animal. It's news to me that we are better than dogs at smelling, better than elephants at carrying things, better than tuna at swimming or have gone through more evolutionary steps than bacteria.

I would also love to hear about Parn's exciting new evidence that a person's animal empathy is inversely correlated with human empathy, or for that matter how her household has a "national" product — though it seems working animals from dogs to bees contribute hugely to the income of our actual nation. These "facts" must be fascinating, unless their assertions are actually just the unfounded hyperbole they sound like.
CHARLES BOSSE, VIA E-MAIL

US is the bully in Mideast playground

Our new secretary of state is just another pol as ignorant and snarly as the last. Ever since oil was discovered in Iran (1901), our behavior as a country has been patronizing, condescending and exploitational. Our "policy" has been scheming, lying, thieving, plotting and actively interfering. Instead of injecting a bit of sanity into the boiling cauldron that is the Middle East, we're behaving like loud, bullying thugs.

Americans are friendly, fair and decent people. Haven't we lost enough of our beautiful young people to death, maiming and madness?!
MARY O'KANE, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Those with whom you hang out, including your family, will have a powerful effect on your attitude. If they're doers, you're apt to be a success too.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Even if most of your efforts are spent doing things for others, when it comes time to divvy up the results, you'll share in what they gained.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you have to make a presentation, try to isolate the key players, because you'll do much better and be far more dynamic working on a close, personal basis.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Don't be reluctant to be of assistance to an associate if it's needed. You could be surprised by how much your actions help your situation as well.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Occasionally, it can be therapeutic to break away from everyday routines and change the game plan. If possible, seek out involvements that are fun and relaxing.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. In order to get what you're entitled to, it might be necessary for you to be assertive. Don't hesitate to be bold when circumstances require it.

Mass app-eal

These locals have developed smart ways to figure out how to drink more of what you like with bartenders who you like

▶ On the Bar's Ian Stanczyk, left, and TJ Connelly

On the Bar

With On the Bar, you can track your favorite bartenders to see when and where they're on the stick that night. You can also use the app to see what others drinkers are recommending at the moment and, more importantly, keep track of that amazing cocktail that you had one (or four) of the night before. After all, sometimes it can be a little difficult to remember the details.

We've all accepted the fact that the secret ingredient to any alcoholic beverage is a camera so we can then post a picture of it on the Internet, right? Since we've all got a drink in one hand and a smartphone in the other, we might as well make use of our tech-minded double-fisting to improve our drinking options. The new wine-focused app Drync Direct got us thinking about some of the local options. Here are a few worth checking out.

Pintley

Wading through the sudsy deluge of beer is about as confusing as the thousands of wines available now as well. Pintley tries to narrow things down for you using a RIYL model that we're all familiar with from Amazon and Netflix and so on. When you sign up, you rate beers you've already tried, and it learns what you've liked or disliked, then spits back recommendations for other brews you haven't tried yet. You can also add tasting notes or interact with friends on the network whose taste you trust for those confusing beer-soaked times when you need a second opinion.

Wine is confusing. That's the basic premise behind this new app, just launched at the Boston Wine Expo in mid-February. While there are lots of options for keeping track of what you drink and taking notes on different wines, Drync Direct aims to further streamline the process by then enabling users to purchase those wines.

Let's say you're at a bar or a party and you really like the bottle you're tasting. You scan the label, and you can purchase it then and there to be shipped to your home.

Easy to warm up to

Cinquecento is a delicious place to wait out the end of winter Their kale salad isn't just for health nuts

Cinquecento's decor has an existentialist vibe.

ERIK BALDASSARI

Cinquecento's dining room has an instant feeling of warmth. During the winter freeze, that's saying a lot. Perhaps it's the subtle lighting playing off ruby red Cinzano bottles stacked as decoration. Perhaps they thankfully turned up the heat.

Cinquecento sits in defunct South End Italian restaurant ROCCA's spot. The once-airy interior was painstakingly revamped – the brick overlay was done twice to get the required shade of gray. It has an existentialist feel, with dark woods and burnt brown upholstery. The bar was moved upstairs, adding a more communal atmosphere. And when the occasion arises in a few months, the patio is there for al fresco fun.

Of course, Cinquecento simply means 500 in Italian. Besides a street marker, here it an-

Aquitaine Group, which repurposes European dining culture so well.

At Cinquecento, the menu supposedly echoes a Roman trattoria and includes familiar batches of pastas, antipasti, fish, meats and salumi. Chef de cuisine Justin Winters — who hopped over from Sorellina — includes two standouts, however. Kale (formerly mostly used as cattle food) is the trendy vegetable du jour. Cinquecento's kale salad might sound like it belongs at the local health-nut restaurant, but it's unbelievably tasty. The chopped kale is perfectly seasoned with shavings of pecorino and heavily oiled, which brings out the robust texture and flavor. A few pine nuts and a little lemon juice shows off its phyto-goodness handsomely.

As an entree, a thick fluke fillet cooked in parchment paper — Sogliola al Cartoccio — is moist, yet firm and dense. The fish is steamed on top of scalloped potato and layered with porcini and leeks, forming a delicious jus.

Add some garlicky broccoli rabe, if you can take more verdure!

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages.

End game

Did we say there were just two standouts? Wrong: The torta di zucca is a traditionally inspired zucchini olive oil cake. It's undersweetened, giving the oil room to command the cake's taste and luscious mouth feel. A dollop of heavily flavored toasted almond gelato seals the deal.

KATE NASH INDULGES IN A LITTLE 'GIRL TALK'

CHRISTOPHER DADEY

The Brit singer talks her new attitude, new look and new album 'Women connect with each other on an emotional level in a really big way,' she says

Kate Nash will play Brighton Music Hall with Supercute! at 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Kate Nash arrived in New York two nights ahead of the February blizzard, but ran smack into the storm that is Fashion Week. Nash recorded her new album, "Girl Talk," and filmed three movie roles last year, so it's not surprising that she already has a killer promo schedule: packed designer shows and DJing Teen Vogue's party, which morphed into actress Chloe Moretz's sweet sixteenth. No jet lag slacking for the Brit singer-songwriter, that's clear.

"Once you get your head around it and don't take it too seriously, it's really fun," says Nash of New York City's notoriously insane Fashion Week. "It's just a fun trip, really."

If the 25-year-old sounds a little different this time, that's because she is. The punky pop "Girl Talk" was fueled by a breakup and, well, girl power: her all-girl band and some good-listening gal pals.

Reaching out

Nash is partnering with Plan International's Because I Am A Girl global initiative to improve the harsh lives of girls in developing countries.

"You hear about horrible things in Saudi Arabia and India," says Nash. "There's still a long way to go."

Visit www.because-iamagirl.us for more info.

"Women connect with each other on an emotional level in a really big way," Nash says. "That was a really important thing for me over the last year, what with all the personal things I was going through."

She uses the phrase "going through" in reference to the breakup.

"The record itself is basically purging for me," she continues. "Purging what I was going through."

Kate Nash has revamped her style a bit, with the key component of that word being "vamp." She says she's not trying to be somebody she isn't, though.

"Fashion is liberating once you've figured out your personal style," she says. "It's getting your head around it in the right way and not trying to change yourself. It's about making you feel good."

This British band's name is not a reference to guitar virtuoso Django Reinhardt. Neither is their sound, which often gives off an electronically tweaked British Invasion vibe, making them both retro and futuristic. Keep an eye on these boys.

Former prospect Westmoreland retires from Sox

Once considered a top prospect in the Red Sox organization, 22-year-old Ryan Westmoreland announced he was retiring from baseball yesterday after having two brain surgeries in the past three years.

"Although it is a very difficult decision for me, it has become clear that the neurological damage caused by the most recent cavernous malformation and surgery leaves me with physical challenges that make it impossible to play the game at such a high level," Westmoreland wrote in an e-mail.

▶ Brad Marchand has been tearing it up offensively for the Bruins as of late.

Overlooked no more

Despite small frame and humble start, Marchand has become one of the main players in B's Stanley Cup-level mix Winger is exploding offensively

It didn't take long for Bruins left wing Brad Marchand to become a cult hero in Boston.

As a rookie, he had 19 points (11 goals, eight assists) in the 2011 postseason when the B's won their first Stanley Cup in 39 years and celebrated in an extended bar-hopping fashion that would make Rob Gronkowski blush (for a second at least).

The most impressive thing about Marchand, however, is that he seemingly hasn't let that great start go to his head. He scored 28 goals in 2012 (one behind Tyler Seguin for the team lead) and he has been on a tear to begin this season with a team-high 12 goals and six assists through 20 games. Combined with linemates Patrice Bergeron (five goals, 13 assists; NHL's second star of the week) and Seguin (five goals, 10 assists), they've been the most consistent forward line for Boston thus far. Bruins head coach Claude Julien has noticed Marchand's spectacular play:

"He's got a quick release and good shot. When we need a big goal, he seems to be able to find it. He's a clutch player and the type of guy you like to have on your team."

Standing at a not-so-intimidating 5-foot-9 inches and rounding out at 183 pounds, Marchand has been overlooked for much of his hockey-playing life. The winger is his own player, but he certainly fits the bill as the classic overachiever, the likes of which you'll find on any good team in virtually any team sport. What makes him particularly fun to watch is that he plays with an edge and a snarl, plus he can chirp with the best of them.

Marchand's shooting percentage of 29.7 was leading the NHL through Sunday for players who have appeared in more than half of their team's games.

Last weekend was huge for Marchand, who potted the game-winner against Tampa Bay on Saturday afternoon (his fourth straight game-winner), then added a career-high three assists in the 4-3 loss to Montreal on Sunday night.

"He's burying the puck and he's playing well," said Seguin. "He's a guy that steps up when the team needs him and he's a leader."

Sports in brief

▶ Wes Welker

GETTY IMAGES

Welker just may walk after all

A day after it was rumored that Patriots slot receiver Wes Welker would re-sign with the team, ESPN's Adam Schefter reported that Welker has "no plans" to re-sign with New England before testing the free-agent waters.

Unrestricted free agents like Welker can officially sign with other teams starting Tuesday.

The Patriots opted not to use their franchise tag on anyone Monday, the first time they did not use the tag since 2008. If the Patriots had used the tag on Welker like they did in 2012, No. 83 would have seen a 20-percent raise in pay, according to ESPN.

Welker had a team-high 118 catches for 1,354 yards last season. MATT BURKE

Teixeira latest Yankee to be bit by injury bug

In less than 24 hours, Mark Teixeira went from having what was believed to be a minor injury to being out eight to 10 weeks with a strained right wrist.

"It's not what you want, but it's what you've got to deal with," manager Joe Girardi said.

On Tuesday, Teixeira strained his wrist taking some swings at the indoor cage while preparing for his appearance with Team USA at the World Baseball Classic.

The official diagnosis is a strained ECU tendon.

Teixeira was going to be the starting first baseman at the World Baseball Classic, but now he won't be playing any first base until May.

"I'm obviously worried about it," general manager Brian Cashman told reporters Tuesday. "Wrists are very unpredictable." LARRY FLEISHER

EXCEPTIONAL CARE. WITHOUT EXCEPTION.

NOT SEEING THE RESULTS YOU WANT FROM YOUR ANTIDEPRESSANT?
Please consider our depression research study.

Our office is conducting a research study to evaluate whether adding an investigational medication to an approved antidepressant therapy might give relief from the symptoms of major depressive disorder (MDD) when added to a current antidepressant.

You may be able to take part in this study if you:
- Are 18 - 65 years old,
- Have been diagnosed with Major Depressive Disorder (MDD),
- Have been experiencing symptoms of depression for at least the past 2 months,
- Have been taking at least one antidepressant medication as prescribed but it is not helping you enough.

Additional criteria will be assessed by the study doctor.

The study lasts 15 to 22 weeks. Participants will receive either the investigational medication or a placebo (an inactive substance).

All study-related medications, office visits and examinations will be provided to you at no cost.
